AN INSPIRING GE SUCCESS STORY

BY CHELSEA KAMILLE F. FANDIÑOLA OF UNIVERSITY OF THE PHILIPPINES MANILA, DOCTOR OF MEDICINE, CLASS 2020

Some of my friends call me Chelsea or CK. I know my name, as what other people would say, is not conventional for a boy. Believe me, I asked why and loathed my parents before for giving me such name. But they would justify it for its uniqueness. Besides, it's only the society that labels a name's "gender".

I am the eldest of three children in the family and we live a simple life in Brgy. Punta Tabuc, Roxas City, Capiz. My dad used to be an OFW and my mom is a public-school elementary teacher. Our parents may have raised us without the luxuries of life, but they have provided us with pretty much everything we needed. They have been exhausting their resources, even their own comfort, and direct their sacrifices to the education of their children.

We may have not much but our parents always shower us with all the love and support we need. Growing up with these challenges, I learned to be focused, resourceful and become highly motivated. I have always been an achiever and student leader as a child. I always strive for excellence in everything I do. In fact, I have acquired my B.S. Biology degree with a Cum laude distinction in the University of the Philippines Visayas.

I always wanted to become a doctor to heal and improve people's lives and so I pursued this noble path despite of the hindrances and financial barriers. I should just work hard and transform this dream into reality. I have a big dream and I have been taking big steps to reach it. The values and lessons I will learn along the way will be my guide to be the doctor I envision to be, a compassionate doctor our people deserve.

ON BEING A SCHOLAR

Being a scholar of this company is both an opportunity and a responsibility. I have a burning passion for learning and motivation to become the best and uphold excellence in everything I do. I am a student that does not only persistently works hard academically, but I also try to improve my own community's quality of life. I volunteer for medical missions and do community works. I would like to translate this passion by also influencing the people around me and provide them a helping hand. In this way, I get to combine my desire for helping others and my love for learning. My family maybe financially challenged but I see this as a fuel for my determination. When I become successful someday, I also wish to light a flicker of hope for others and influence them to pay it forward and create ripples of change someday.

FUTURE PLANS AND CONTRIBUTION TO THE SOCIETY

I wanted to become a doctor our people deserve; motivated with love and compassion for others. I intend to serve and render healthcare services in my province, Capiz, or other underserved regions of the Philippines.

My strong leadership qualities and experiences will enable me to work for the community-at-large in the future.

I want to provide quality healthcare at the same time educate and mobilize the people towards a healthy community.

SOME WORDS I WANT TO SAY TO GRUPPO ESLABON

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for choosing me as a recipient of your company's Scholarship Program. I want to say thank you for giving hope for students like me to go after our dreams and beat the odds despite being challenged by hard luck. I hope you may continue to spread the light to more deserving students.

THE GE CSR INITIATIVES FOR CY 2019

One of the major GE CSR activity of the year was in Capiz, the home province of the company founders. Capiz was badly devastated by the very strong typhoon, Typhoon Ursula which traversed through the Visayas during Christmas eve and Christmas day itself.

In coordination with the office of Gov. Esteban Contreras and PACC Commissioner, Hon. Greco Belgica, the company immediately organized a massive relief operation (see photos below) spearheaded by the GE Chairman, Mr. Dante A. Eslabon and the GE President, Mr. Ferdinand A. Eslabon.

A total of 4,000 relief packs were distributed by GE to Barangays Malapad Cogon, Mianay, Acbo, and Parian of the Municipality of Sigma.

The residents were very grateful to the much needed assistance and were assured by the GE Founders that more and bigger rounds of support, to include livelihood and scholarship programs would be immediately organized by GE as a follow thru.

UNDERSTANDING TERRORISM

BY: COL AJ SALEM (RET)

"GE is partnering with Col AJ Salem in managing Spartan K9 Services, his military education and experiences would be very beneficial to the corporate clients in achieving the maximum asset protection against all kind of security threats."

What are the true attributes of a Terrorist? Determining what drives people to terrorism is no easy task. Asking a terrorist to become the experimental subjects is improbable in which examining their activities from afar can lead to inaccurate conclusions<sup>1</sup>. Additionally, as commonly says, "One group's terrorist is another group's freedom fighter, as the millions of Arabs who support Palestinian suicide bombers will attest."<sup>2</sup> One of the books that I read related to this topic was entitled The Sociology and Psychology of Terrorism: Who Becomes a Terrorist and Why, authored by Rex Hudson. This book has a compilation of several terrorist leaders, and shows that all terrorists share some characteristics, and these characteristics include being psychologically vulnerable rather than psychotic, driven by personal ideologies, and are far more educated than most suspect. In this essay, I argue that terrorist profiling may be impossible because although there are many characteristics that terrorists share, there are many more differences, which make it impossible to build a template that fits all profile. However, we can use known terrorist profile data to determine similarities such as psychological profile, ideology, and educational background.

The Olson hypothesis states, "Participants in revolutionary violence predicate their behavior on a rational cost-benefit calculus and the conclusion that violence is the best available course of action given the social conditions."<sup>3</sup> However, this model has failed to explain why the decision to commit violence has often passed down from previous generations onto young individuals who are not psychologically developed. Many terrorist leaders were psychologically vulnerable when they made their decision to participate in terrorism because they had already been exposed to the lifestyle. Some examples of this include Renato Curcio, leader of the Italian Red Brigades, whose uncle was murdered in a Fascist ambush<sup>4</sup>. As a child Curcio's mother was not around often, and having a father-like uncle murdered left Curcio vulnerable to thoughts of revenge. Lelia Khaled, secretary of the PFLP's Palestinian Popular Women's Committee, "lived in impoverished exile" as a child<sup>5</sup>. At eight years old, she became knowledgeable about the Israel Palestine conflict and decided to actively participate as a revolutionary. Her training began at the age of eight, and by the age of fifteen, she was actively participating in political movements<sup>6</sup>. Other examples of psychological vulnerability include Mohammed A. Salameh, a World Trade Center bomber, who came from a family of guerrilla fighters, and Sabri al-Bann, leader of the Abu Nidal Organization, who was thrown into poverty by the Israelis after they took the land and wealth his father had accumulated from farming and agriculture.

Childhood exposure to violence, poverty, and terrorism does not ensure that someone will become a terrorist, but it does provide a gateway into the world of terrorism. In Psychology of Terrorism, Randy Burns explains this connection and points out that a person's emotion and behavior is affected by injustice, marginalization, abuse, and humiliation<sup>7</sup>. The examples that were mentioned previously also inhibit either one or more of these components. Another classic example of this is the case of the young combatants of the Abu Sayaff Group. Many of them had been exposed to violence and poverty, marginalization, and injustice at a young age. Thus, it can be concluded that adolescent experiences such as violence, death, political action, and poverty can lead to psychological vulnerabilities, which make it easier for someone to transition into a full-blown terrorist.

Ideology is a common characteristic among terrorist. While ideology carries an implied parallel to religion, ideology does not derive itself specifically from religion. The reason we see religion so often associated with terrorism is because religion is part of culture, and culture forms large portions of ideology. An ideology is the beliefs and values that shape the rules one lives by<sup>8</sup>. These beliefs and values are based on childhood experiences, as well as what we are taught from the people and institutions around us. Ideology will always be associated with terrorism by default because everyone, not just terrorist, has an ideology. Terrorist ideologies, however, share commonalities that are seen across a wide variety of terrorist.

Sheikh Ahmed Yassin, founder of Hamas, shares the same ideology that most Palestinians share. They strongly believed that they have been pushed out of their land that is ancestrally and rightfully theirs. And for whatever reason, they cannot come to an agreement with the Israelis regarding these issues. These differing ideologies have led to thousands of deaths since the 1948 Israeli occupation, and the ideological differences remain unsolved. Imad Fa'iz Mughniyah, the head of Hezbollah's Special Operations command, developed his ideology when his village was taken over by Israeli troops, and after he was injured by artillery fire. Mughniyah's ideology led him to terrorist acts, and his psychological vulnerability allowed Syria and Iran to use him for multiple attacks on Americans, hijackings, kidnappings, and murder<sup>9</sup>. Curcio's ideology was based on his view that his enemies were those who "built their accursed fortunes on the material and intellectual misery of the people," and the people who trained her at age eight forced Khaled's ideologies upon her<sup>10</sup>.

Ideology is a frightening concept when it comes to terrorism, as it is the mechanism that allows terrorist to justify their actions. A driving factor behind individual terrorist or terrorist group motivations is that their ideologies shall not be questioned<sup>11</sup>. Those who question the group's ideologies are viewed as someone who is putting the security of the group at risk, and are eventually tortured, killed, or banned from the group.

A common misconception is that terrorists are uneducated. A journal article written by Alan B. Kruger and Jitka Maleckova aimed at studying the relationship between education, poverty, and terrorism concluded, "Palestinian suicide bombers are at least as likely to come from economically advantaged families and have relatively high level of education as to come from the ranks of the economically disadvantaged and uneducated," and "the vast majority of those individuals involved in terrorist activities as cadres or leaders is quite well educated."<sup>12</sup>

Examples of well-educated terrorist include Mohammed A Salameh, one of the World Trade Center bombers, who had a degree from the University of Jordan.<sup>13</sup> Ahmed Ramzi Yousef, another World Trade Center Bomber, graduated from Britain's Swansea University with a degree in engineering. A third World Trade Center bomber, Mahmud Abouhalima, not only studied education at the University of Alexandria, but also used his intellect to develop a coupon redemption scam that reportedly made between $200 and $400 million dollars which was spent on terrorism activities. Other educated terrorist include Curcio who attended the Ferrini Institute in Albenga and received a scholarship to the University of Trento, Khaled who attended American University of Beruit and the University of Russia, and Osama Bin Laden who graduated from King Abdul University in Jeddah.<sup>14 15 16</sup>

Many others such as Charles Russell, Bowman Miller, and Maxwell Taylor share Kruger and Maleckova conclusion that there is no direct link between lack of education and terrorism<sup>17</sup>. These conclusions show that developing a terrorist profile based on formal education may be an impossible task, however we can conclude without a doubt that not all terrorist are uneducated.

Constructing a profile that covers all the characteristics of a terrorist is not possible. Experts who study terrorist should not be discourage by this, but rather encouraged by what they can conclude, and how they can use these finding to help prevent terrorism. If terrorist are psychologically vulnerable, interrogators may find success by exploiting psychological weaknesses to collect intelligence. If experts hope to stop future youth from becoming terrorist, they must create a mechanism by which a new ideology can be formed that does not consist of blind violence. Preventing the development of terrorism before it occurs by educating the youth and systematically removing demagogue extremists that generate new terrorist every day is an obtainable goal. Individuals who are surrounded by terrorist activities for most their lives will be more susceptible to becoming a terrorist than those who are not. If intervention takes place early for likely candidates of terrorism, psychological weaknesses can be exploited to construct a new ideology through proper, or in some cases, forced education.

IT WAS ANOTHER EXCITING YEAR FOR GRUPPO ESLABON

Capping the year, the Eslabon Security Agency (ESA) security force scored a major security accomplishment, in support of the government's war on illegal drugs, and under the close guidance and supervision of the GE President, Mr. Ferdinand A. Eslabon, with the consent of the property management office, a month-long surveillance project was launched against a Korean national identified as a certain KIM JUNG-KIL, 54 years of age, who then had a residency contract at Grass Residences, the property is being secured by ESA.

Apparently, Mr. Kim was monitored and was suspected by the ESA security personnel to have transformed his rented unit into a makeshift drug laboratory.

Throughout the project, an official coordination was made with the NBI by ESA through its Task Force on Anti-Illegal Drugs (TFAID).

Yielding positive surveillance results and eventually securing a search warrant, issued by a Quezon City Regional Trial Court, an official NBI -TFAID raid was executed last December 3, 2019.

Recovered inside the condominium unit of the suspect were undetermined quantity of methamphetamine hydrochloride, commonly known as Shabu, essential drug manufacturing chemicals, improvised laboratory instruments and more importantly, records of drug transactions that eventually led to more raids and arrests by TFAID.

COMMENDATION

FERDINAND "BOY" A. ESLABON
Gruppo Eslabon

For providing valuable intelligence information that contributed much to the successful anti-illegal drugs operation conducted by the NBI, which resulted in the discovery and dismantling of a makeshift/kitchen-type laboratory operated by Korean national Kim Jung-kil, in Brgy. Santo Cristo, Quezon City, that paved the way to the seizure of 3,961.13 grams of methamphetamine hydrochloride or shabu, 28,496.89 mL of essential chemicals, precursors, and laboratory equipment used in manufacturing shabu, with an estimated value of P26,935,684.00, during the service of search warrant conducted on 3 December 2019.

Such show of support and cooperation with the TFAID operatives in carrying out its mandate, demonstrated at any time of the day or night and without expecting anything in return, exemplified the true qualities of a Filipino who is committed to help the government in its vision for a drug-free Philippines, worthy of recognition and emulation.

Given this 27th day of January 2020, in the City of Manila, Philippines.
